What is the National Health Services Directory?
The National Health Services Directory is a joint initiative of all Australian governments, delivered by Healthdirect Australia, to enable health professionals and consumers to access reliable and consistent information about health services.

Why update your practice record on the National Health Services Directory?
Each service provider will be able to maintain its own information, including consent for what consumers, other providers and authorised users can see and use via the self-authorship model. Self-authorship is a way in which service providers can keep their own details up-to-date in the National Health Services Directory including services offered, contact details and operating hours. Self-authorship will enable service providers to have control over the information displayed and easily make real time changes.

Winners will be drawn at random and announced 15th June. Program officers will visit on site to deliver the prize.
